Cicero forges Alliance with leading UK legal recruiter.

Cicero has joined an alliance with Chadwick Nott, in order to help with the sourcing of candidates from the UK, and to provide a service to candidates looking to further their experience with a stint in Europe.

“It was an obvious move to make” said Cicero's Managing Director Jonathan Gill. “With so many lawyers electing to gain some offshore experience, and with the increase of lawyers having gained that experience and now wishing to return to practice again in Australia, it became clear in discussions with our clients, that to further serve them, we needed access to returning lawyers.”

“The decision to link with Chadwick Nott looked to be the right one on paper” said Gill, “they too have a division that moves partners and teams, one that helps senior lawyers, and a separately branded division for legal support staff, Matrix, so the fit with Cicero and Cicero Support worked well. And having recently returned from a second trip to the UK, and visited Chadwick Nott's offices, I am very comfortable with the people I have met. It is clear that there is a lot of effort from both sides to make this alliance work.”

Chadwick Nott has offices in London, Bristol, Manchester, Birmingham and Reading, and were recently voted “No. 1 overall with law firm partners for our reputation for recruiting junior, middle and senior assistants” and “No. 1 with law firms for personal relationships with our recruitment consultants” (Source: Legal Week Intelligence Survey November 2006)
