

Can you imagine not being blind, yet not understanding everything you see?

Or not being deaf, but not comprehending everything you hear?

Can you imagine being isolated from the world because you cannot make sense of it?

For a person with an autism spectrum disorder (ASD), that is 'their world'. Autism spectrum disorders are lifelong disabilities that affect the way a person communicates and relates to other people and the world around them.

Autism Spectrum Australia (Aspect) plays a vital role as the largest autism-specific service provider in Australia. Aspect's services include early intervention, special schooling, family support, telephone information and referral, research, outreach, behaviour intervention, community participation and employment services.

With generous community support we are able to help over 6,000 people each year whose lives are impacted by autism. But with an estimated 120,000 Australians having an ASD, we know there is so much more to do.

We are grateful to Cicero for generously creating this opportunity to find Sydney's brainiest lawyers. Together you will help create a brighter future for those Aspect supports. May the best team win!
